

A boy and his mother took a walk in the jungle. "Oh my!" said the mother. "Look at that! A man-eating plant!"

"What does that mean?" asked the boy.

"It means that it is DANGEROUS!" replied his mother. "Don't touch it!"

"I will be back in a minute," said Mother. "Stay right here."

After his Mom left, the boy walked over to the plant. "It is not dangerous," said the boy. "That plant cannot hurt me. I want to touch it."

The plant woke up.

The plant opened his eye.

The plant opened his mouth and . . .

SWALLOWED the boy!

"Help! Help!" yelled the boy.

"Yum! Yum!" said the man-eating plant.

It was not a good day for the boy!

Soon mother came back.

"Where is my child!" she screamed.

Do you see where the little boy is?

"Oh no! He has been eaten by the plant!" said Mother.

"I must get him out. But HOW?"

Mother returned with a chain saw.

"VROOM !" said the loud chain saw.

"Oh no!" said the man-eating plant.

VROOM VROOM !

Mother cut the man-eating plant in two.

She pulled the boy out of the plant's stomach.

"I warned you not to go near it!" said Mother.

"I am sorry," said the boy.

After that the boy ALWAYS obeyed Mother!
